

What are people saying about DDP?

- ❖ “Never make assumptions about a person until you know all the facts”
- ❖ “Diversity is a much larger scale than I would have thought prior to this class. Even the smallest change can build a connection with others”
- ❖ “At the start of this program I was under the impression that DDP would only cover race relations. It was interesting to see that it covered all aspects of diversity”
- ❖ “My greatest challenge while participating in DDP was probably sharing honest feelings and words but enlightening nonetheless. I found that when you name the elephant in the room you learn about yourself and the other person”
- ❖ “My greatest insight was sharing experiences and knowledge with other group members. Being open to new ideas that were shared by others”
- ❖ “My greatest insight was learning all the challenges that are still affecting others in regards to diversity and how the littlest things can effect people both positive and negative”
- ❖ “My greatest insight was creating an awareness of a problem – one cannot address an issue when you don’t know it exists. Getting the tools and techniques to address these issues should yield positive change”
- ❖ “ It was insightful and eye-opening”
- ❖ “As a result of DDP I will be more mindful of opportunities to modify my own behavior and of the role of each individual in creating our culture or changing our culture”
- ❖ “I want to say that I really learned a lot from my participation in the group. It was very eye-opening and I am glad I had this opportunity.”

These comments were taken from past participants' evaluations.